Yes, all RMs (Ca, JW, J, M, OC)	Yes, all RMs (Ca, JW, J, M, P)	Yes, all RMs (JW, J, M, OC, P)	Yes, all RMs (JW, J, M, OC, P) (10)	Ah: N/A B: N/A Co: yes ShM: N/A (11)	Ah: N/A Al: yes JW: N/A SC: yes

(10) Compliance with some constitutional and European Union principles is required.

(11) RMs have the right to choose staff members of the schools they own. These officials then select teachers and educational staff, but are required to notify them to the Ministry of Education. The latter has no authority over the teacher selection, but the Ministry of Labor has to ensure that the rights of workers are respected.

Questions	Denmark	Greece	Italy	Portugal	Egypt	Lebanon
4. Can teachers be dismissed if they do not conform their behavior to the principles of the faith-based private school?	Yes (12)	No	Yes	Yes (13)	Yes (14)	Yes (15)

(12) Yes, if the dismissal is necessary and proportional to the role of the teacher, which means that the headmaster can be dismissed, but the math teacher most probably not.

(13) It depends on how serious the infringement of religious principles is. Privacy of the teacher must be respected.

(14) Schools can dismiss teachers who violate work regulations set by the school administration, in accordance with the procedures specified in the Labor Law.

(15) Faith-based private schools can hire teachers of different religious affiliations. All teachers are encouraged to conform their behavior to the social, ethical and religious principles of the schools.

Questions	Denmark	Greece	Italy	Portugal	Egypt	Lebanon
5. Are faith-based private schools free to reject the admission of students (for example on the ground of the different religion they profess)?	Yes (16)	Yes	No (17)	Only some types of faith-based private schools (18)	No (19)	Yes (20)

(16) Yes, but this is much debated.

(17) No, if it is a school recognized by the state ('scuola paritaria').

(18) It depends on the agreement they may or may not have with the state. Refusal of admission must be well grounded.

(19) Legally they do not have the right to set rules that prevent the enrolment of students from different religious backgrounds, but in practice this prohibition is circumvented.

(20) They self-set a quota in relation to the percentage (or number) of students they accept from other ROs in the school. Once the quota is reached, they reject the admissions of students belonging to other ROs.

(26) No, although private schools established as non-profit-making entities may be entitled to grants from the state, according to the Law 682/1977 on Private Schools of General Education and Boarding Schools (as amended in 2020).

(27) Only private schools recognized by the state ('scuola paritaria'). It should be noted that these are funded like any other private school, and not because of their religious orientation.

(28) Only the private schools that have signed an agreement with the state in areas where the public school system is deemed insufficient.

(29) Since they are not recognized by the state as religious minorities, Ahmadis and Jehovah's Witnesses cannot open their own faith-based private schools, and no financial aid is granted to them. The state financially supports recognized RMs on an annual basis. This includes aid for educational institutions, and other specific areas such as elderly care facilities, hospitals, etc. The state does not specify which faith-based private schools are granted the financial support, leaving this matter to the leaders of each RM. Other types of financial support are granted to specific faith-based private schools by the Ministry of Education when the Ministry itself receives donations from local and/or international funders.
